Marco Vega, a university freshman, is home for summer vacation. As much as he enjoys his studies in biology, he loves hiking and camping in the mountains even more. He's beginning to miss Rita, the girl who caught his eye in school. Hiking in the mountains, he is captivated by a giant monkey-eating eagle hunting near his mother's farm. The eagle and its mate have genetically mutated into a huge and ferocious subspecies following their consumption of prey tainted with potent enzymes and chemical formulae that were left by scientists when their field laboratory was leveled by a powerful typhoon. He becomes consumed with the thought of finding the eagle's nest to gain real-life knowledge of the species and perhaps a role in their conservation when he becomes a biologist. He sets out on the trail with his horse and dog to track down the eagle. He braves the treacherous paths and inclement weather while admiring the beauty of nature that is around him. He discovers a large marijuana operation and barely escapes the armed guards who chase him...

Reviews

This book will never be straightforward to start on reading through but quite enjoyable to learn. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting reading this one. Your lifestyle span will probably be converted once you complete reading this publication.
