Excerpt: . I ll have no kisses, on my life j I fear thy breath alone shou d give Infection: Harlot! I ve a wife! -- Harlots as well as wives must live. So no more words, my lord, butpay-j Handsomely too, let me advise you For if ypa let me go away, Without my dues, I ll advertise you. Much to your reverence s fame It will redound, when known that you, So late at night, to meet me came;, And, having kiss d me, bilk d me. too. Perhaps you will so hardy be, To tell your friends tis all a lie; That you ve had nought to do with me/--r But can you prove an alibi? Oh! you re an artful hussey! says My lord: But rightly serv d am I. Here, take my purse;--One always pays for being in bad company....
